Hi Greg.....how are you? Off to Syria, are you bonkers? I guess we'll have to rescue you and Leonie if necessary. Things are settling in here.....we're redoing our kitchen already even though we only got in the house on Jan 22. I guess we rented for too many years and didn't get to do enough DIY....boys are settling in as well although Mike (oldest boy) is really homesick for his friends in Australia.

Refinery here is amazing....we're overrunning our TAR budget tremendously ($20+Million) but I have to say that I couldn't turn some of this work down as it is critical to the safety of the unit.....corrosion issues, cracking metal, etc. I'll probably ultimately get fired over some of these cost issues but I have to feel I'm doing the right thing. Anyway, travel has slowed so that's good.

I look in on Kwinana often....wondering how you guys are doing and missing Australia and the refinery. I truly left a part of me there and was utterly disappointed I didn't get to return in Jan....I'm sorry you still don't like your ops mgr. I think he is trying to do the right thing and you just need to get to know him better.....

Tell the RCU guys hi as well as the rest of your crew....take care and let me know occasionally how the dockers are doing...

Kathleen

>Hello Kathleen,
>remember me? How are you going in your new job? Often think of you, wondering about your "progress" and relocation home. Suppose you do not have enough time to remember old Kwinana. Things bumbling along OK as the new manager settles in but there is a general lethargy and crisis management air about the place. You know my feelings about the operations manager, not one of your better decisions.

>Well, Sunday Leonie and I are off on our Middle East odyssey, have butterflies as the way we do it is not exactly first class but more interesting this way. Syria in particular appears really interesting. If anything untoward happens would like to think BP can arrange a SWOT team for a rescue.

>Saw an interesting program on 4 Corners the other night regarding global dimming due to the atmospheric pollution reflecting the sun's radiation thus ameliorating greenhouse. You may find this of interest because I can assure you it will "blow your socks off". To add credibility it was produced by the BBC.

>Well wont take up much of your time, hope to hear from you at some stage.

>All the best, Greg.
